Please join us at 11:00 a.m. on June 11 as we learn about the benefits of engaging Hospice personnel in the care of our nursing home resident family members. Readers may ask why do we need the services of Hospice if nursing home staff are caring for our loved ones? Well, hospice members are extra ears and eyes to look after the well-being of family members. Hospice is also one-on-one whereas nursing home staff are responsible for every resident on the hall.

Most of you probably cringe at the word “hospice,” thinking it means the end of life is near. But that is not necessarily the case. Many clients are on hospice for months and years. It can be a great help to both clients and their families experiencing this phase of life.

Hospice has volunteers in addition to paid staff members. These caring individuals can “walk” one through the aspects of end of life issues. They also follow-up with grief counseling for family members. We hope to see you on June 11 as we learn valuable information for our personal use and also to pass along to others in the community we serve.

From the President’s Desk . . . . Martha Deaver

On behalf of AANHR I have recently been involved in several investigations involving Arkansas nursing homes. Searcy Healthcare, Hillcrest Care and Rehab in Prescott, along with the AR Veterans Homes in Fayetteville and Little Rock have recently made negative headlines. AANHR has advocated in all of these cases. Our organization is here to speak up for those who can no longer speak for themselves. If we can help readers in any way please feel free to contact one of our members using the numbers printed on page seven of this newsletter. You can also go to our website aanhr.org for more information. We are here for you.

I am sad to report to our readers that Arkansas has the highest percent of violations (according to CMS’s latest data) for failure to prevent and treat bedsores. Forty-seven percent of AR nursing homes were cited. The national average is 19.43%.

If your family member is immobilized in bed or sits for long periods of time, he/she is at risk for bedsores (sometimes called pressure sores or decubitus ulcers). Bedsores can be prevented or successfully treated if caught early, but frequently lead to death from infection if allowed to develop.

A family member should regularly check the pressure points of heels, elbows, ears, and especially buttocks, which are areas where the weight of the body tends to exert enough pressure to cut off the blood flow to skin and underlying tissues. Bedsores start out as reddened areas that do not blanch when pressed but will progress to ugly open wounds if blood continues to be cut off to the underlying muscle due to pressure. This is no time to worry about privacy or embarrassment – it is vitally important to monitor the condition of the skin over the entire body and to notify the Director of Nursing at the first sign of trouble and insist on a plan of correction for healing and prevention. Look under all bandages to see that care is given and healing is taking place. (This paragraph reprinted from Good Care in Nursing Homes: Everyone’s Basic Right, pg 8 AANHR).

Readers can read about a case where bedsores were fatal in Mike Masterson’s column in the AR Democrat-Gazette reprinted with permission on pages four and five.

Hillcrest Care and Rehab of Prescott was cited for several infractions:
1. Actual harm for failure to treat and prevent a resident’s bed sore.
2. Actual harm for failure to notify her doctor when her bed sore became worse.
3. Failure to obtain the proper treatment orders from the doctor.
4. Failure to call and notify her legal representative, family.
5. Actual harm for failure to provide proper nutrition to prevent bedsores, protein drinks.
6. Failed as required, to contact the doctor within 24 hours when her condition worsened but they waited 13 days!
7. Actual harm for failing to give her the required nutritional support to prevent three bedsores over a period of five months, a bed sore on buttocks, bed sore on top of foot & bed sore on ninety-five percent of her heel!!
8. Cited for failing to follow doctors orders to prevent a deadly UTI for her.
9. Cited for actual harm for failing, as federal law requires, to maintain a Quality Assurance & Assessment Committee consisting of the DON, physician and at least 3 other members of the nursing home’s staff. This committee is in place to implement plans and procedures for quality of care to develop and implement plan of action to correct and identify quality of care violations….They did not have this committee! All these violations not only harmed the resident but numerous other residents who reside at Hillcrest Care and Rehab in Prescott, AR. The affect of these violations on this resident were the most severe…..She died.
AANHR wishes to thank the caring Certified Nurse Assistants who provide the minute to minute hands on care for our beloved senior citizens who depend on this loving, conscientious care which adds life and health to their time spent in a nursing home.

On a lighter note . . .

Dr. LaVonna Traywick: Humor, Laughter, and Aging

Dr. Traywick challenged everyone with the questions “What makes you laugh? When do you laugh? Where do you laugh the most? And with whom do you laugh the most. She said most of us don’t take humor seriously enough and need to learn to use it effectively making it part of our life.

She asks “why should senior adults be concerned about humor”? Because there are physical benefits, mental benefits and social benefits of laughter. A good laugh gives the same benefit as deep breathing, cleansing the air in your lungs. It lowers blood pressure and causes the release of endorphins that reduce pain. Laughter improves mental health by stimulating both sides of the brain and is a natural connectivity, laughing together and bonding. Dr. Traywick points out that senior adults tend to laugh at other people and themselves in shared predicaments and embarrassments. The things seniors find funny seem to be related to the stressors experienced during this time.

We are told to seek out and take advantage of opportunities to laugh every day, remind yourself to have fun by spending time with people who make you laugh. Look for humor everyday by paying attention to activities around you. Put humor into your surroundings. And take a “fun break” every day to laugh. You will bring joy to yourself and those around you. Figure out what makes you laugh, then do it.
